"Virginia Spears," the Algebra teacher calls roll
(Her name is Speans)
And Virgie winces and raises her hand.
"Here." Soft voice.
She never corrects the teachers.

"Leonard T-sosie."
(His name is Tsosie.) Silent first letter as in ptomaine, Ptolemy.
Silent as in never asking questions.
Another hand from the back goes up. No voice.

"Mary Lou Yazzy. Are you related to Thomas Yazzy?"
Yazzy is a common Navajo name, like Smith or Jones.
She rhymes it with jazzy and snazzy.
Mary Lou with puzzled expression. "No."
"Oh, I thought you might be. He's quiet too."

I start to tense up because I'm next with my name that sticks out
like her sensible black high heeled lace-ups,
clap, clap, clap down the hall.
"Laura Toe."
And I start to sink,
to dread hearing it on the bus tossed around
like kids playing keep-away.

Suddenly we are immigrants,
waiting for the names that obliterate the past.

Tohe, from Tóhí means Towards Water.
Tsosie. Tsíísí means Slender.
And Yazzie, from Yázhi, means Beloved Little One/Son.
The teacher closes the book and we are little checkmarks besides our names.

Roanhorse, Fasthorse, Bluehorse, Yellowhorse, Begay, Deswod, Niilvod, Chee, 'Átsidi, Tapahonso, Háábaah, Hastin Nééz.
