

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

In the article “Concord attack though random women on walk dead from her head injuries”, by Charlie Good Year and Jason B. Johnson, in the San Francisco Chronicle.” An Antioch mother attacked during a midday walk on a popular concord trail was killed by blows to her head in what may have been a random attack”, authorities said Wednesday. I think that this is horrible that people can’t enjoy their walk without having to get hurt or killed. It is sad that you have to watch out for your life because you can get killed, hurt, kidnapped, and raped everyday. This one man said that their were always people walking on the concord trail, but ever since Wednesday’s attack, people were afraid to walk on the concord trail. Why can’t people just walk without getting hurt or killed? I think that the author did a great job on writing this article.
